

Climb For Change

The charity SACRED (South African Children's Resource for Education & Development) has a 5 man team in training – in preparation for an arduous 6 day climb up Mount Kilimanjaro.

The charity was originally set up by employees of Grundfos Pumps to aid the children of colleagues in South Africa gain an acceptable education. The plight of many children in South Africa was very soon highlighted and it became clear how critical education is to the altering of historically ingrained divisions of class and race within South Africa, it is a means to the escape from poverty and that the charity's remit would have to be broadened

SACRED are now, on a daily basis making a difference to the lives of more than 5,000 children. With more money SARCED can help even more children.

The team will be climbing the 5,892 meters in March 2010, please visit www.justgiving.com/C4MC and support our brave team. Every penny collected will go towards the projects SACRED are funding, such as - mobile laboratories, libraries, kitchens and vegetable gardens, school uniforms & stationary, computers & internet access – to name just some. SACRED need more money to keep these projects running and to widen their scope to include even more children. Donate whatever you can afford, no amount is too small – or too large!!

The children thank you!